A Bothersome Name.

This habit of naming boys after some friend and hanging two "last" names to a lad all of his life is about played out. At least, that is what Mr. Sawyer Cook, of this city, thinks about it. His baby had the cramps the other night, and paregoric did not seem to have the slightest effect upon the little sufferer, so Mr. Cook flew for the doctor post haste. He pulled the bell with a rousing jerk. Up went the side window, and the physician's voice called excitedly, "Who's there?"

"Sawyer Cook," hurriedly cried the anxious father.

"Saw my cook, did you? Well, what the deuce do I care if you saw the cook, the chambermaid, the butler and the stable boy? You let that bell alone, you loon, or I'll break your face! Get out of that!"

"But I tell you I'm no loon. I'm Sawyer Cook!"

"Confound it, what do I care if you did see my cook? That's her business if she wants to gallivant around at night. I mind my business, she minds hers, and you had better go about yours if you want to keep out of trouble. Hear me?"

"I don't know anything about your servants, doctor, and I am not drunk; but my baby is sick, and if you don't hurry up she will die!"

"Your baby's sick? Who are you?" cried the doctor in astonishment once more.

"Why, I'm Mr. Sawyer Cook, of 845 Gripe street, as I told you before, and my baby's dying with the cramp!" cried the agonized father.

"Oh, beg pardon, sir—I thought you were some bum. I will be down directly!"

The baby is all right now, but Mr. Sawyer Cook wants his name changed.—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

Rob Roy Had the Best of It.

The far famed Rob Roy MacGregor was confessedly the best swordsman of his day. His celebrity for wielding the claymore excited MacNeil of Barra, to visit him for the express purpose of trying his prowess. Barra was a gentleman, possessing the qualities that endear a chief to his clan, with the accomplishments which confer acceptability in polished circles. On arriving at Rob Roy's house the MacNeil chieftain found he was at Buchanan attending the market, and thither he repaired. He [illegible] several gentlemen on horseback on their way home, and accosting the nearest, begged to know if Rob Roy was still at the fair.

"Who inquires for Rob Roy?" inquired a voice, more remote.

"MacNeil of Barra," said the chief.

Rob Roy approached, announcing himself, and after exchanging salutes Barra said:

"I have heard Rob Roy extolled as the best swordsman of our times, and have come a long journey to prove whether he or I deserve that commendation."

"Chieftain of Barra," said Rob Roy, "I never sought a quarrel with any man; and if it pleases you to think yourself the better swordsman I have no objection to your opinion."

"This is the language of fear," said Barra.

"Who dares to speak of fear to Rob Rob MacGregor?" said MacGregor. "Dismount, sir, and try if I'm afraid."

The chivalrous encounter immediately commenced, and Rob Roy found Barra nearly his match; but after much dexterous play he wounded the chieftain in the sword arm, so that he was for several months confined at Buchanan.—Scottish American.

The Sing of Cheops.

Cheops was the builder of the pyramid which bears his name, and, as if to make the structure perpetuate his deeds for all time to come, the very stones and bricks of which it is composed are stamped with his name. Cheops lived nearly 3,500 years ago, his great pyramid being an antiquity in the days when the great nations of old were in their youth, and yet we of this Nineteenth century can have the satisfaction of looking upon the very ring he wore so proudly upon his royal finger! The hieroglyphics on the ring are minutely accurate and beautifully executed, the ring itself being of finest gold and weighing nearly an ounce. The oval signet bears the name of Cheops, which is in hieroglyphics in perfect accord with the stamp on the bricks of the great pyramid. This remarkable antiquity was found in a tomb at Ghizeh. It now repoces in the museum of the New York Historical society.—St. Louis Republic.

Writing in Broct Characters.

As most adults write without much regard to the angle which the words take, it is to them a matter of supreme indifference whether upright or sloping calligraphy is best for their health. But with children it is different. Hence there may be something in the recommendation of Drs. Von Reuss and Lorenz to the supreme council of hygiene for Austria that in future children should be taught to write in erect characters, for in this form of penmanship the scholar faces his work, and is spared the twist of the body and neck which is always observable in those who write slantwise, and the tendency to spinal curvature induced thereby.

Guaranteed Cure.

We authorize our advertised druggist to sell Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, upon this condition. If you are afflicted with a Cough, Cold, or any Lung, Throat or Chest trouble, and will use this remedy as directed, giving it a fair trial, and experience no benefit, you may return the bottle and have your money refunded. We could not make this offer did we not know that Dr. King's New Discovery could be relied on. It never disappoints. Trial bottles free at Geo. H. Wood's Drugstore, regular size, 50c. and $1.00.

MOONLIGHT ON THE LAKE.

In the autumnal gloaming, sad and chill,
The moorland mere in silent slumber lay;
Unruffled were its waters, darkly gray,
And all its sentinel reeds stood stiff and still;
The peewit's last good night fell clear and shrill,
The west was dusky brown with dying day,
When came across the heather far away,
The gleam of moonrise o'er the distant hill.

Like flame that flashes through the cannon smoke
A full moon climbed above the swaying firs—
The rushes felt that herald breeze of hors;
They whispered to the water that awoke,
Athwart its face a golden ripple broke,
And the queen kissed her nightly worshipers.
—J. G. F. Nicholson in Chambers' Journal.

In a Street Car.

There was a typical bit of life shown in a recent incident in a Brooklyn street car. Two fashionably dressed women, strangers to each other, and each with a child on her lap, found themselves seatmates in a crowded car. The handsome blue eyed boy on one knee soon fell a victim to the coquetries of the dainty little maiden with golden curls and soft brown eyes on the other, and to the mutual satisfaction of the parents a pretty little flirtation went on.

Farther up the car on the other side a plump, rosy cheeked miss of two years, a comfortably clad but evidently poor child, stood against her mother and admiringly watched the pair. At a certain street the mother of the boy signaled to stop. "Kiss the baby," she said, as she stood the little fellow on his feet, meaning of course Miss Golden Hair, and he turned to obey.

At that moment, however, the other little girl, making her way out with her mother, was exactly abreast of him, and Master Blue Eyes, finding this little face before him, promptly bestowed a sounding, hearty smack upon it. And everybody smiled, while the prince was led out, the beggar maid wonderingly went her way, and the disappointed princess, who had leaned forward for the royal salute, buried her face in her mother's cloak, learning thus early in life the bitter truth that the kiss is not always for the one who expects it.—Her Point of View in New York Times.

Why Meat Costs More Than Vegetables.

Meat is a manufactured product for which a large amount of raw material is required. The manufacture of meat is a process of transforming the vegetable protein, fats and carbohydrates of grass and grain into the animal protein and fat of beef, pork and mutton. The same principle applies in the production of milk, eggs and other animal foods. In the most economical feeding of animals it takes a number of pounds of hay or corn to make a pound of beef or pork. In other words, let the farmer make animal protein and fat from vegetable materials in the best way he can and still he must consume a large quantity of soil product to produce a small amount of animal food. Hence animal foods are costlier than vegetable.

This is the simple explanation of the fact that in most parts of the world meat is the food of only the well to do, while the poor live almost entirely on vegetable food. Thus ordinary people in Europe eat little meat, and in India and China they have none at all. It is hard enough for them to get the nutriment they need in vegetable forms. Meats they cannot afford.—Professor Atwater in Century.

About Pronunciation.

The dictionaries are not reason enough for any one's making himself utterly singular among his fellows. On the same principle we in America continue to say "skedule" instead of making people open their eyes by saying "schedule." When we are in England we may say "tong" instead of "tung" for "tongue," but the wise American will go with all his countrymen in such a matter when he is at home. Very few people, either English or American, ever say "dyuty," "constityution," and so on, and yet that is undoubtedly the way we ought to pronounce them—if we are going strictly by the authorities. It is better to be idiomatic, either in writing or speaking, than to be just right by the book.—Boston Transcript.

Too Much for Belief.

Old Dickey S., a very wealthy but very illiterate East India merchant in London, took a pair of compasses and set about examining a large map of India, the margin of which was illustrated with drawings of the wild and domestic animals of the country. Suddenly Dickey dropped the compass in amazement. "It can't be! It ain't in the horder of nature that it should be! Impossible! Ridiculous!" "Why, Dickey, what's the matter?" "Wot's the matter? Vy, this Bengal tiger is ninety miles long!" Dickey had measured the tiger by the scale of the map.—New York Advertiser.

London's Yearly Fruit Supply.

In one year the quantity of fruit unloaded at London bridge was no less than 17,716,000 bushels, the value of which was estimated at $38,940,000. This chiefly consisted of apples, oranges, lemons, onions and potatoes, the two latter, though not strictly coming under the appellation of "fruit," being reckoned in with the rest.—Exchange.

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation, curative power superior to any other article. A Boston lady who knew what she wanted, and whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

To Get

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was. I had taken it, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other.

Hood's

When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable, suffering a great deal with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked, and had for some time, like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." Mrs. Ella A. Goff, 61 Terrace Street, Boston.

INSECTS THAT EAT CURIOS.

How the Officers of the Smithsonian Institution Combat Foes.

Bugs are a source of much anxiety and annoyance to the curators of birds and mammals at the Smithsonian institution and in the National museum. If given a chance they would gobble up the dead and stuffed creatures, not even sparing the bones and the beaks. Accordingly, those in charge have to be perpetually on the alert to combat these small but not contemptible foes.

If a stuffed "specimen" is thoroughly poisoned with arsenic when it is prepared there is little or no danger that it will ever be attacked, but the collections in charge of Secretary Langley are gathered together from all parts of the world and very many of the contributions are not properly protected in this respect. This is true particularly of those which come from the tropics, where peppers and pungent spices are considered sufficient for purposes of preservation.

So they are for awhile, and then, the spices having lost their strength, the enemy begins to get in its work. Not only does this happen with stuffed birds and beasts, but the skeletons that reach the institution with the flesh roughly chopped off them and folded up in the smallest possible compass for transportation are frequently so poorly protected by poisoning that maggots get at them and eat the ligaments which join the bones so as to seriously injure their usefulness.

Three kinds of insects threaten the stuffed collections. One is the familiar moth, which eats the feathers or hair down to the skin and leaves unsightly bald patches. Another is the "dermestes," or common "lard beetle," which attacks and eats holes in the fatty skins. But worse than either of these is the "anthrinus"—a beetle about the size of a No. 8 shot, and so small therefore that it does not render itself evident and is not readily found when sought for.

It is very fond of anything horny, and, getting a chance at a bird, it will begin by eating off the covering of the bill, denuding the legs afterward and chewing up the shafts of the bigger feathers. If it has an opportunity, it will regularly honeycomb the horns of animals presented for museum purposes.

Of course it is understood that these three bugs do all the damage in the larva stage of their being—that is, while they are yet worms. Another sort of insect gets into empty eggs and eats up the lining membranes, where careless collectors have left them inside, as they should not do, but it cannot injure the shells and does no harm, except to make a litter.

The best remedy, or preventive, known is bisulphide of carbon; but it has so horrible a smell that Curator Ridgway will not use it for keeping the birds under his charge. He prefers to employ the next best thing, which is naphtholine, a product of coal tar. A handful of crystals of it will kill a case full of insects. It has the disadvantage of irritating the breathing passages, producing a chronic catarrh. Curator of Mammals True prefers the offensive bisulphide of carbon.

A great many things besides beasts and birds at the National museum have to be protected from insects; for example, the costumes of all nations and other dry goods of every kind, which afford an agreeable diet for devouring bugs. It is no small task to protect these perishable articles from the attacks of many legged scavengers with stomachs for anything short of metal and no respect for the most sacred of curios.—Washington Star.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that contain Mercury, as mercury will surely destroy the senses of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co.

Sold by Druggists, price 75c. per bottle.

Have you written me yet? If you haven't, wisdom and intelligent ambition suggest write to-day. I promise you my special, personal attention. I undertake to briefly teach any fairly intelligent person of either sex, who can read and write, and who, after instruction, will work industriously, how to earn Three Thousand Dollars a year in their own localities, wherever they live. I will also furnish the situation or employment, at which you can earn that amount. I charge nothing for my services, but expect a reasonable portion of what you make after you are successful, as above. Nothing difficult to learn, or that requires much time. I desire but one person from each district or county. I have already taught and provided with employment a large number who are making over Three Thousand Dollars a Year, each. All is new, solid, sure. Full particulars free. After you know all, if you decide to go further, why no harm is done. Address, E. C. ALLEN, Box 420, Augusta, Maine.
